THE SHORT VERSION

Two kinds of money. One slate.

Teton County, August 2026. The money on the left is charity and by law cannot touch an election. The money on the right can. No filing moves a dollar from one side to the other. The same people run both.

CHARITY MONEY

cannot support or oppose a candidate

A Jackson family foundation

$89.7 million. Run by a state legislator. One trustee is on the slate.

“Civic engagement” groups across Wyoming

More than $2 million over four years — some of it routed through a New York pass-through. All of it lawful. None of it can touch a ballot.

…and $1,000,000 into a donor-advised fund

Where that money went next is on no filing anywhere.

POLITICAL MONEY

can — and its donors are never named

A “social welfare” group with a Sheridan mailbox

$8.7 million in, $6.8 million out. Not one donor named. It paid for all three of the things below.

- A PAC — gave the three candidates $5,500
- A housing group — backed the three — endorsed two, recommended one
- A second PAC — paid the consulting firm the three hired

THE SAME PEOPLE, ON BOTH SIDES

the people who appear in both panels

runs the foundation · state legislator	Liz Storer	formed her own PAC to promote the slate — married to one of the three foundation trustee	Luther Propst	one of the three candidates
paid $67,087 by the foundation	Nikki Kaufman	chaired the endorsing housing group until 2024 · ran another Sheridan-funded group · paid consultant to Propst
ran a foundation-funded group for four years	Skye Schell	founded the consulting firm all three candidates hired
Storer Foundation trustee	Ryan Lance	signs every one of the PAC’s filings as treasurer

THE SLATE — all three won the August 18 primary

Karyn Chin · Luther Propst · Ali Dunford

Same PAC money. Same endorsement. Same consultant.

Nothing here is illegal. The law lets every one of these facts sit on a different form, filed in a different place, months apart, and no voter could assemble the picture before the vote.
