What a voter saw before Aug. 18, and what sat behind it

The Teton County Commission Democratic primary, 2026. Left: what reached a voter. Right: what the filings show.

Donors never disclosed Money, to scale within each row

What a voter could see	What the filings show
The endorsement Shelter JH endorsed Chin and Dunford and recommended Propst.	Action Now Initiative, Arnold Ventures' 501(c)(4), Texas $250,000 Western Futures Fund, a Sheridan 501(c)(4) $70,000 A donor-advised fund run by the Storer Foundation's board $10,000 per Storer and Shelter JH The primary endorsement page mentioned none of it.
The checks Way Back PAC gave the three winners $5,500.	Way Back PAC's Wyoming report: $5,785,771 spent $5,750,271 on one line: "Non-WY expenditures" (99.4%) $35,500 to Wyoming candidates (0.6%) Sponsor and biggest donor: Western Futures Fund, $1.4 million Treasurer: Ryan Lance, a Storer Foundation trustee
The consultant The three campaigns paid Mountain Movement Strategies.	Co-founded by candidate Karyn Chin and Shelter JH co-founder Skye Schell. From the three 2026 campaigns $17,064 From Wyoming Way PAC, 2024 $47,805 seven-eighths of its money came from Western Futures
The slate Keep Jackson Whole PAC, Rep. Liz Storer's committee, promoted all three.	$12,500 from three named donors, reported to the county. The one piece a voter could trace to its source.

Each piece is legal and each is public somewhere: the county clerk, the Secretary of State, the Federal Election Commission, IRS returns from at least seven organizations, a foundation website and a newspaper interview. Nothing here alleges a violation of law.
